Guest speaker for the occasion was Mr. John Burger, chairman of the Business Education Department. Rabbi Pachino gave the invocation at the beginning of the assembly and Mr. Hafner explained the requirements of the N.H.S. and read the names of the new members.

Also assisting in the inductions were President Kevin Murphy, who introduced the speakers; Vice-president George Weber, who passed out the membership pins to the new inductees; Secretary Betty Heald, who passed out the membership cards; Treasurer Bonnie Fiedler, who gave the N.H.S. pledge to the new members; and Mary Ann Bukowski and Diatra White who were seated at the sign-in table. The glee club, directed by Mr. FitzHenry, sang two selections during the assembly.

Seniors' Last Day

As their last day at Central draws to a conclusion, Central's seniors look forward impatiently to Baccalaureate and graduation. Slamming their lockers shut, scuffing down the brown linoleum hallways for the last time, pausing under the Clock, what do they feel?

What lies ahead of them?

Whatever their future plans may be, Central's impression on the seniors will not soon be erased. They'll long remember the games, the assemblies, their classes and teachers, the trophies, club days, the stairways, and most of all, their classmates. Their education at Central hasn't been just facts and figures. The real learning at Central comes from her people, with their different ethnic, social, and religious backgrounds. The ability to communicate, to meet and understand one another, has been one of Central's most important gifts to the seniors.

In the years to come, we seniors will be able to take an active role in society. The world is ours to change, if we're willto meet its challenges head-on. "If you're not part of the solution . . . you're part of the problem." This slogan, used by the VISTA program, describes people and society today. Our experiences at Central have helped prepare us for the time when we can become part of the solution. "Keeping the faith" at Central, as we've been encouraged to do by our teachers and alumni, has been only the first step toward maintaining high standards in our attitudes and behavior. The rest is up to us.
